Introduction

Welcome to Team ONIBE's 2nd Live fan callbook!

This book was made to help prepare you for the Saitama leg of Aqours 2nd Live, regardless of where you're watching it—a live viewing, a delayed viewing, or even at the venue itself.

Even if you're completely new to concerts, don't worry! This book will teach you the basic calls you can shout back during the concert, as well as basic actions you can do with your light stick, so that you'll have a general idea of what to do while watching the live. This book is just a general guideline and it's not mandatory to follow everything, enjoy the concert at your own pace!

Only songs with a significant amount of calls were chosen for this book. A full reference guide for all songs can be found on our website at onibe.moe/callbook.

If you enjoyed reading this callbook, please be sure to give us a shoutout on Twitter @teamonibe. We'd love to hear from you—and consider following us as well! Team ONIBE is a Love Live translation group whose goal is to spread Love Live content to the English community.
Thanks again, and have fun at Aqours 2nd Live! :D

Disclaimer for those at viewings

While you may be watching this in a theater setting, keep in mind that there is certain etiquette you should follow to ensure enjoyment for everyone and for the continued success of Love Live.

Remember that this is, first and foremost, a performance. Everyone's focus should be on the performers, so please do not be excessively distracting or do anything that will attract attention to yourself or disturb others around you.

To those of you who have been to concerts or Live Viewings before, please keep in mind that newcomers will be looking to you to learn calls and etiquette. Set a good example for these people; don't use obnoxious calls or be a general nuisance.

Most importantly,
DO NOT take pictures or record video of the stream.

Some countries have lost the right to hold any viewings for 2nd Live, most likely due to illegal recordings. If you see someone in the theater recording or taking a photo, kindly tell them to stop and delete it.

This is standard etiquette for Japanese concerts and we need to show them that we respect their rules so they continue to bring us more shows like this.

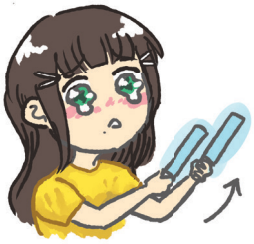
Concert Calls

In Japanese idol concerts, the audience typically participates in the performance with calls and light stick motions. While participating is not mandatory, doing so along with the audience will surely make your concert experience more exciting!

This page outlines some of the basic calls. Although it might look intimidating, it's actually quite easy to follow along when you're in a crowd with knowledgeable leaders. A video demonstration and more info about concerts and light sticks can be found here: https://onibe.moe/wota

Light Stick Motions

You mostly wave your light sticks to the beat of the song. Usually you set it to the color of your favorite character, although certain songs have a standard color. When in doubt, follow along with the crowd.
(Ex: HAPPY PARTY TRAIN features Kanan's iconic green color)



In slower songs or during solo parts, you may perform what is known as "kecha", which is a slower wave motion where you slowly raise your light stick in front of you.

Hai Call

Simply chant "Hai" repeatedly every other beat. This is often found during instrumental breaks or as a follow up to a PPPH.

Seno Call

This is usually shouted by the leaders to lead into another call, "Seno > (chant)". The type of chant that comes after it depends on when the call is used in the song. This call is useful for beginners to listen for.

Hai Call Combo

Typically starts with a "Seno" call, followed up with two regular "Hai" calls then by four faster hai, "Hai! Hai! HiHiHiHi".

PPPH

A follow up to the Hai Call Combo during the pre-chorus by repeatedly chanting, "Oooh > Hai". This can be followed up with Hai Calls before entering the chorus of the song.

Fu Call

A number of "Fu"s are usually called during choruses inbetween certain lines and other parts where they fit the beat.

Fuwa Call

Chanting Fuwa four times consecutively during the chorus; usually a "Seno" Call followed by "FuwaFuwaFuwaFuwa". This is accompanied by spinning your light stick above your head.

Common Call Combos

Combo 1
Seno > Hai! Hai! HiHiHiHi
PPPH x4 -> Hai! x8
Combo 2
Oooh > FuFu
Seno > FuwaFuwaFuwaFuwa
